FOREWORD

FOR many homes, certain constructions of ranges would not only be out of place, but an actual extravagance, and, in the end, would not so well meet the housewife's requirements as something of different character. There must, however, be no difference as to quality; no "skimping" in construction. Such a course disregards the basic principles of cooking—which are always the same, in the larger range or the smaller.

Materials, durability, design and constructional excellence are standardized in the following MAGEE styles, the VICTORIA, ADVANCE, GRAND, OXFORD, EMPIRE, IDEAL, UNION and FANEUIL "C," just as particularly as in the other types of MAGEE ranges. It follows that they perform their purpose with equal efficiency.

In examining the various styles shown, with a view to purchasing, it should be borne in mind that each and every detail of MAGEE construction is the demonstrated result of over sixty years' experience in meeting the needs of American housewives. Every possible requirement is anticipated, assuring a MAGEE style for every size kitchen, satisfying every cooking and heating need and adaptable to every pocketbook.

MAGEE RANGES have won HIGHEST AWARDS wherever exhibited.

Styles, attachment, special features and dimensions are fully given in the following pages.
